Chapter 1 by Anna Cook

children choke on baby shrimp as do ageing cats.

If you die, you must be a wimp, because sometimes eagles wear hats.

if a bird kills your father,
I suggest you jump off a mountain.
your face is on fire, oh but why bother. lets all go fishing in the fountain dead children are often caught singing, as well as a blueberry tree.

but if you hear a mild ringing, throw all your money into the sea

Once you are broke,
and your face is in flames

the smoke will kill your whole family your life pretty much sucks at this point. you will play death games.

Chapter 2 by champion, Cui

"The day that it rains is the day that you die."

Said Destiny.

You should be used to now, you got killed in July.

There wasn't even a testimony.

So here you are,

No more threats or scars.

Just you in this place of death.

You shalt roam it yet

lest you go w/no return to the life that you miss and the love that you never got to kiss.

With love comes pain

with life comes death

with yester comes 'morrow and...with joy comes sorrow.

You'll wait a day or two till the sun shines through,

in this dreary weightless rain.

You hope at least for a window pane and glass that doesn't stain but then that'd mean that you would have to forfeit the game.

You search for a name

They all sound the same, to you.

No ones and Nobodys alike,

oh what a fearful sight

on such a fearful night
